Tools

- Recommended- hair clips and hair band
- Needed- rubber bands, mane brush, comb(rat-tail comb recommended)

I recommend to part your horse's natural tail hair horizontally across the tailbone for a good fit (Note: that the Equitail can also be installed below the tailbone). Create a parted section that can hold the weight of the Equitail as seen in the photo. Above your parted section, you will want to have a decent amount of natural hair to cover the top of the hair piece, this will give it a seamless look.

Twist, band or braid the top area of your horse's natural hair to keep it out of your way during installation.

Now you are ready to install the Equitail! After you remove your Equitail from the packaging, you will notice that it comes in two twisted sections. Make sure you install Equitail with the elastic mechanism facing you. Ensure that the Equitail mechanism is expanded to reveal four rectangular open slots. Lay the Equitail slots over the created section of your horse's natural hair. Divide the section of your horse's natural hair into four corresponding sections and pull all four sections through the Equitail slots.

Rubber band the sections of natural hair together over the cords on the Equitail. It is recommended to rubber band two sections together over the elastic cord. Tighten the rubber band's grip around your horse's natural hair. Now you can pull the cord locks up to tighten your Equitail. This will help hide your Equitail connection and mechanism.

Afterwards it is recommended to rubber band the two sections together to create one section. Now untwist your Equitail and gently brush it before you mix it with your horse's natural tail hair. After Equitail is brushed blend it with natural hair and style as desired.

For removal

-Part the Equitail to reveal the rubber banded sections of your horse's natural hair. To keep your removal neat and tangle free, it is recommended to re-twist your hair piece like it arrived and clip out of the way. I would recommend a seam ripper to remove the rubber bands.

Please be safe and mindful as you use any sharp tool near your equine pal. Now cut your rubber bands from your horse's natural hair and gently pull off your hair piece. It is recommended to re-twist your Equitail after removal.
